Amazon workers from all over the region delivered their Play-Doh donations to Smiles Central on a chilly Spring Day in March. Their donations were the result of their annual "Battle of the Buildings" competition where workers from the buildings battle to collect the most Play-Doh for our organization.

Amazon representatives expected 45,000 cans of Play-Doh to be donated. They surpassed that expectation! Two additional warehouses, who didn't pass along their tallies, brought their collections, pushing the total to over 50,000 cans! The winner of the "Battle of the Buildings" was TEB6 from Cranbury, New Jersey, collecting 8,814 cans. A big thank you to Amazon Employee and Caitlin's Smiles Board Member Mary Ellen Mathis for taking the lead on this collection, now in its 8th year! Caitlin's Smiles was one of their featured workshop activities as well as one of their service projects. We thank them for bringing attention to our outreach and for assembling kits that will be sent to children in medical facilities. See more photos from the day here.
